Description:

This house is a two story, three bay log structure covered with vinyl siding. Openings are irregularly spaced across the front with a closely placed window and door at the west side of the front and the east window placed far to the east. At the second story there are just two windows, there being no central second story window. Windows have single pane sash and a hip roofed dormer window has been added to the front roof. A hip roofed porch extends across the front. Visible exterior elements of this house date from the 20th century, but the structure beneath could be much older.

The 1877 Atlas map shows it belonging to Mrs. Shanaberger.
